« Secret of Mixing Colors from Angel Liana » is written and illustrated by Rosemary H. Cohen. Children as well as adults will enjoy the illustrations and reading this educative fairy tale.

The story takes the readers to a peaceful world, where Angel Liana teaches the secret of mixing colors. She guides the readers how to mix the three primary colors in order to obtain the secondary and complementary colors, as well as creating different tints, hues, tones and gradations. Her method of teaching mixing colors and dying is simple, easy and fun.

Rosemary is an award winning author and painter. Besides being an accomplished painter, she is a very appreciated educator.

Dr. Cohen's books are known to have different layers. The readers always read her books more than one time as at the first reading there is the simple story but then there are more depths in its content.

In this book, Angel Liana besides teaching the secret of mixing colors, she also teaches the anatomy of fish. The sanctity of Shabbat, the resting day, and at the same time, she introduces a new approach to a delicate subject: death, with a healing message of hope to the grieving individuals.

This is a well known subject to the author; Liana the heroin of the book, in reality represents her 18-year-old daughter Liana, who was killed by a drunk driver, 25 hours before leaving for college.

Rosemary has painted the beautiful illustrations on silk but Angel Liana's face, is actually Photo Shopped from Liana's real pictures.
